Expert Advice When Buying Laminate

Three things to consider when buying laminate...

1. AC Rating

A floor's 'AC' rating indicates durability for abrasion and impact resistance. The higher the rating, the more durability. In a high-traffic area like a hallway, AC4 is a great choice.

- AC5 | Heavy Commercial Use
- AC4 | Heavy Residential/General Commercial Use
- AC3 | General Residential Use
- AC2 | Light Residential Use

2. Thickness

A thicker laminate is more impact resistant and can be quieter with less sound transfer. Plus it looks and feels more like real hardwood underfoot.

3. Underlay

Investing in a good underlay is important. It gives the flooring stability, support, reduces noise, prevents moisture, and supports the locking system. All these are vital to ensure the sturdiest floor installations.
